New Mokena Voters Given Certificates At Citizenship Day Event

A colorful and deeply impressive parade and program marked Mokena's observance of the newly created "Citizenship Day" which the last legislature designated be observed during the month of October, Sunday afternoon.

A parade, headed by the Veterans of Foreign Wars color guard followed by the members of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Wm. Martin Post No. 715 of the V. F. W., of the Lincoln Estates, the Mokena School Band, the Mokena Girl Scouts and members of the Mokena Civic Association and citizens, started from the Mokena school grounds at 3 o'clock, the line of march being to Division street, south to First street, west on First street to Mokena street, to Front street, east on Front street to Division street and north on Division street to Carpenter street to the school auditorium where a very fine program was presented in charge of N. F. Heiman, as chairman.

The program was opened with several selections by the Mokena School Band, followed by the audience singing "America". The Pledge of Allegiance was given under the leadership of R. A. Bechstein, president of the Mokena Civic Association.

Mrs. Albert Cappel read the Declaration of Independence and Mrs. Raymond McGuire read Lincoln's Gettysburg speech.

The address of the afternoon was delivered by Louis A. Bowman, Secretary of the Illinois Society of the Sons of the American Revolution in which he graphically pointed out to the class of young citizens and the audience in general the significance of "Citizenship Day" and gave a historical background setting of the ideals of the forefathers who founded our nation and outlined the necessity of good citizenship in order to preserve the ideals of democracy as first established by the patriots and founders of our system of government. Mr. Bowman emphasized that it should always be deemed a high honor to be a citizen of the United States.

The Constitutional Oath for the new citizens was administered by J. E. Knowles of Mokena and the Certificates of Recognition to the New Citizens were presented to them by R. A. Bechstein, President of the Mokena Civic Association.

The certificates bearing the national seal are worded as follows:

In Commemoration of the attainment by (Name of new citizen) of the high privilege and great responsibility of the voting franchise as a citizen of the United States of America and the State of Illinois this memorial is presented this 15th day of October, 1939.

(Signed) Illinois Conference for the Celebration of Citizenship Day By Charles B. Elder, Chairman, By N. F. Heiman, Chairman, Mokena Civic Association.

Each certificate bears the seal of the Illinois Society of the Sons of the American Revolution.

At the close of the presentation of certificates, Mrs. Ludwig Theil, a native of Germany, and who has become a naturalized citizen of the United States, gave the following interesting story on the questions "Why I came to the United States and why I became an American Citizen":

"I have been asked to relate my story of why I came to the United States and why I became an American Citizen. I think that my reasons for coming to this country are vastly different from what you might expect them to be.

"I did not come because my religion was persecuted in my homeland; I did not come because I had no freedom of speech and I did not come because I wanted an opportunity to gather riches in this country. I could worship the way I chose at home and I had freedom in every respect, but I was deprived of the most vital thing for a person—the chance to earn a living.

"Why would my homeland not offer me this opportunity? It used to do that for every one of its citizens before the world war. But although the World War had ended in 1918, the indescribable hardships and sufferings, the complete breakdown of the economical system, the uttermost despair which can exist in a nation did not reach its peak until the winter of 1923-24. That, please keep in mind, was five years after the war had ended.

"I know that it would be useless for me to try to describe the chaos that existed in Germany because of the inflation which followed the war. Only those who have experienced an inflation would realize what it does to a nation.

The day I left my home country which was in December 1923, the American dollar was worth one billion German Mark. Please do not think that I made a mistake. You had to have one billion mark in order to buy one dollar. The salary we received in the evening was often just worth half as much the next morning because the mark became so much more valueless within 12 hours. Just try to imagine what it must be to live under such conditions. Five years had passed since the war had ended and still there was no sign of improvement in any way. There was no hope left in the heart of any German. Suicides occurred by the hundreds daily and the morale ever be.

"It was then that the opportunity came to go to America and I accepted it, although I was only a young girl and I did not know a soul in America, neither could I speak the language, but the utter despair and hopelessness which had gripped me and my family after we had lost everything was so great, that nothing looked blacker to me than our existence at home at that time. So if I should summarize it all I would say that I came to this country because I was a victim of the horrible world war and its aftermath, although it was supposed to have ended five years before. And in connection with this let me say, that if any of the statesmen of the world today would have experienced such despair, there would never be another war.

"And why did I become an American citizen? I have lived in the United States for fifteen years now and I have made various efforts to really know and understand America. I have found that this country has so many fine principles and carries out so many of them that I often wish and pray that they could be incorporated into the lives of all the other nations of this earth. I agree whole heartedly that there is nothing finer and nobler in this world than the constitution of the United States of America, a government of the people, by the people and for the people. And may we all know at all times what we have to do in order to preserve it.

"I must admit that more than ten years elapsed before I decided to make America my permanent home. The ties and traditions of one's home country are so strong, that it would never do to simply cut them apart. That would be contrary to the unwritten law to which every one in the world is subjected. I waited until the day came when I felt that I could be a loyal citizen of the United States of America as I had always strived to be to my home land, and you cannot be a loyal citizen unless you have come to understand the land and its people and its privileges and its duties and it is then that the love for it grows strong enough to pledge allegiance."

When Mrs. Theil resided in Germany under a dictatorship, as Hitler did not rise to power until 1934. At the time when Mrs. Theil left, Germany was a republic headed by President Ebert.

Those in the new citizenship class who received the certificates mentioned were: Maxwell Williams, Genevieve Pfleger, Adeline Semmler, Helen Cappel, George Lauffer, Mrs. Ludwig Theil, Gertrude Sippel and Victor Demkov. The latter two were unable to be present.

The Mokena Civic Association sponsored the parade and program. There was a good sized attendance and a number of residents of nearby towns also were present.

The program committee wishes to correct an error they made when they referred to the V. F. W. Auxiliary and members of the Wm. Martin Post V. F. W. as the Legion. These two organizations are two separate and distinct groups.

Tinley M. E. Aid To Hold Supper

Remember Thursday evening Oct. 26th is the date of our "Annual Chicken Supper." This supper will be served at Saenger hall starting 5:30 to 8 P. M.

Will Aid Doctor In Immunizing Work

The Mokena Civic Association at their meeting Monday night agreed to co-operate with Dr. E. G. McMahon in providing a serum for inoculation of school children and also adults as a preventative against diphtheria and agreed to pay in cases where it is not possible for the patients to pay.

Frankfort Couple Observe Golden Wedding Day

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Clark celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary on Sunday, Oct. 15. They enjoyed a dinner in the Hotel Kaskaskia in LaSalle. Their sons, Dr. Paul Clark, Dr. Ted Clark both of Marseilles and Dr. Floyd Clark of Danville arranged this grand event for their parents. They were served with a turkey dinner and all its trimmings. The table was very beautiful with its colors of gold and white. They received gifts that equal the value of $300, including money and other tokens of love. The couple, Mr. and Mrs. Clark, sincerely express their thanks to all who sent them cards and other means of offering congratulations. In the evening the entire family enjoyed a reception given in the home of Dr. Paul Clark, where again every thing was decorated in keeping with the occasion. Mr. Clark served as principal of the Public School in the past and at present is Justice of the Peace. Mrs. Clark has been very active in the social welfare of the town. All extend to Mr. and Mrs. Clark their heartiest congratulations.

Frankfort Mardi Gras To Have Interesting Features

The Frankfort Civic Club is sponsoring a unique entertainment feature for the nights of October 27th and 28th by way of a Mardi Gras. As the dates mentioned are in the Halloween season there will be a Mardi Gras parade in costume Saturday night, October 27th. The same night there will also be a costumes dance. There will be noise makers and other favors in keeping with the Halloween season.

Thru a misunderstanding it was stated in last week's article that prizes would be awarded at the exhibits department on exhibits. No exhibit prizes will be awarded but a door prize will be awarded at the exhibits entrance.

The affair will be staged in the new Frankfort school gym. There will be a fancy quilt and handicraft exhibit, side shows, shooting galleries and various other forms of entertainment. A musical program will be provided by the Frankfort band.

The parade scheduled for Saturday night, October 28th will start from the school grounds and march thru the principle streets of the town and return to the school.

This is one of the first major activities of the Frankfort Civic Club opening their fall and winter season. Everyone is cordially invited to attend.

This is the first time an entertainment feature of this type has been presented in Frankfort.

A very unique and interesting feature of the Mardi Gras which is to be held in Frankfort Public School on October 27th and 28th is a women's household and art display.

Mrs. Henry Briedert is the chairman of this and she will accept any donations that may be sold there. She asks the public to bring quilts, aprons and antiques, hobbies, fancy work and artificial flowers that may be used to display. Mrs. Milton Geuther of Mokena is to be there and will demonstrate all things that are made from Denison Crepe Paper. Each night a door prize will be awarded. Don't forget and be present to enjoy this grand affair.

Mrs. Blanche Mitchell is chairman of the antique department. She will appreciate it very much if anyone who has anything antique to bring it to her home. She will put them on display at the Mardi Gras. She would like to have the history of the article so the visitors will be able to see it at the occasion. Mrs. Mitchell will give all things brought to her the best care that is possible.

Shakes Hands With Eleanor Roosevelt

Miss Margaret Maue, Mokena postmistress returned Wednesday from a delightful trip to Washington, D. C., where she attended the national postmasters convention attended by 5,000 postmasters. President Franklin D. Roosevelt addressed the postmasters from the White House porch. Miss Maue had an opportunity of seeing a portion of the first floor of the White House and had the honor of shaking hands with Mrs. Roosevelt.

Miss Maue also visited the New York World's Fair and witnessed the dedication of an airport near the Fair.

Postmaster and Mrs. Ellis J. O'Daniel of New Lenox also attended the convention, making the trip to Washington by automobile.

RETURNED FROM CALIFORNIA

Mr. and Mrs. John Fox and sons returned Sunday from a trip to Pasadena, Calif., where they have been visiting with the former's sister, Miss Fox who is a registered nurse in the Huntington hospital in that city.

Civic Association Sponsors Scouts

Last Monday night the Boy Scout troop committee met with Scout Commissioner H. G. Boltz of Harvey and Neighborhood Commissioner True Daniels of Tinley Park in transferring the Troop to the Potawatomi Trails Council, pointed out that the locality of the local troop lies in the Indian Trails District instead of the Rainbow Council.

Mr. Daniels will be at the meeting of the Mokena Scouts to be held at the High school Auditorium this Friday night.

Application for the Charter of Troop No. 40 of Mokena will be made in the very near future.

The Mokena Civic Association sponsoring the Boy Scouts and those on the committee are: Stokes Nebeker, chairman, Elmer L. Cooper, Dr. E. G. McMahon, Harry F. Mall and James Egerton.

Return From Wedding Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Fralich of Frankfort who were married Sept. 26th, have just returned from a southern wedding trip. They honeymooned at Miami, Florida and visited with relatives of Mrs. Fralich in Florida and Georgia. They had a wonderful trip. Mr. and Mrs. Fralich will make their future home in Frankfort. The bride formerly resided in Joliet.

Woman Jurors Are Summoned

The first women jurors from this section to be called for jury duty are Mrs. Wm. Lowe of Mokena who is to serve on the petit jury of Will County beginning November 5th. Miss Evelyn Erickson, daughter of Chas. Erickson of Orland township has been called for jury service in Cook County.

Craft Shop Proves Successful

Mrs. Milton Geuther who has opened a craft shop in Mokena reports that the new enterprise has been quite well received. She will conduct an exhibit at the Frankfort Mardi Gras October 27th and 28th. Special attention is called to Mrs. Geuther's advertisement appearing in this issue.

Will Sponsor Halloween Dance

There will be a Halloween party and dance in the Hatch Hall in Mokena on Monday night, October 30 sponsored by the Wm. Martin Post 725 and the Auxiliary of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Refreshments will be served and prizes will be awarded for the best masquerade costumes, as well as the most comical.

Takes Up New Pastoral Charge

Rev. and Mrs. C. E. Schellhase of Frankfort moved Wednesday to their new charge at Pecatonica, Ill., near Rockford. Rev. Mr. Schellhase was pastor of the Frankfort and Green Garden Methodist churches for the past seven years.

Rev. Rudolph Malek of Aurora has been assigned to the Frankfort charge and expects to move to Frankfort this week.

Guest Speaker

The Supt. of Schools Mr. Bottino will be the guest speaker at the October meeting of the Mokena P. T. A., Tuesday October 24th 7:45 P. M. in the school auditorium. Everybody is invited to come out and enjoy the evening. A social hour will follow the meeting.

To Hold Pinochle And Bunco Party

The Schmuhl school in district 121 in New Lenox township will hold a pinochle and bunco party at the school on Wednesday evening, October 27th at 8 p. m. Prizes will be awarded and lunch will be served. Everyone welcome.

Child Stricken

Janette, two year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Stermer of Mokena was suddenly stricken with what at first appeared to be an attack of spinal meningitis, while playing in the yard Wednesday noon. She was taken to the St. James Hospital in Chicago Heights by Dr. M. J. Buckley of Frankfort. At latest reports she is getting along nicely.

Violet Knudson of Mokena Pretty Autumn Bride

A pretty autumn wedding was solemnized in the St. John Evangelical church in Mokena Sunday afternoon at three o'clock, when Miss Violet Knudson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Knudson of Mokena and Walter Lauffer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Lauffer also of Mokena, were united in marriage. Rev. Theo. Haefele, pastor of this church performed the ceremony, the double ring service being used.

The bride was lovely in a gown of brocaded white satin, wore a finger tip veil and carried an arm bouquet of white rosebuds and white miniature mums. She was attended by Miss Dorothy Lauffer, sister of the groom. She was prettily attired in rose taffeta and carried an arm bouquet of pink roses.

The groom was attended by Clyde Yunker as best man.

The bridal party proceeded to the altar to the strains of the Lohengrin wedding march played by Mrs. Alfreda Krapp.

Mrs. Haefele sang two songs "O Promise Me", and "I Love You Truly."

Milton Bettenhausen and Alvin Erickson served as ushers.

At the conclusion of the ceremony a reception was held in the parlors of the church to fifty guests.

The bridal couple left the same evening on a wedding trip, the destination of which was undisclosed.

Mr. and Mrs. Lauffer will make their home with the parents of the bride. The groom is engaged in farming.

Mr. and Mrs. Lauffer received many very beautiful wedding gifts.

A rather outstanding feature of the wedding was the presence of the two grandmothers of the groom, Mrs. Matilda Newton and Mrs. Bertha Lauffer. Mrs. Newton who has been an invalid for sometime was brought to church in a wheel chair.

Honored Bride At Shower

A miscellaneous shower in honor of Miss Violet Knudson who became the bride of Walter Lauffer Sunday was held by Miss Dorothy Lauffer and her sister Mrs. Walter Wynne at the home of Miss Lauffer last Wednesday afternoon. A color scheme of pink and white, the bride's chosen colors predominated. Thirty guests were present. The afternoon was spent playing cootey after which a lunch was served. The bride received many beautiful and useful gifts.

Buys Reg. Bull

A registered Holstein bull has just been added to the herd of Herman Barlewort, Frankfort, by purchase from Louis Holm, Mokena. Change of ownership for this purebred, Mooseheart Sir Segis Goldie 708376, was officially recorded by the Holstein-Friesian Association of America, Brattleboro, Vt. Illinois has about 1,900 purebred Holstein breeders who have registered and transferred some 8,100 animals in the past year.

Will Speak at Episcopal Church Sun.

The Right Reverend George Craig Stewart, D.D., STD., L.H.D., Bishop of the Diocese of Chicago, and one of the ten greatest preachers of the United States, will be the guest of Grace Episcopal church, New Lenox, Illinois, Sunday October 22, at 4:30 pm. At that time he will confer the rites of Confirmation to several Candidates, and preach the sermon. A large attendance is anticipated.

Bishop Stewart is recognized as one of the outstanding Churchmen of the day, and has been active in various positions of the church. His interest in Christian Unity brought him to the Utrecht, Holland conference last year, where he took active part in the leadership. For over twenty-five years, prior to his consecration, Bishop Stewart was rector of the beautiful Saint Luke's Pro-Cathedral, Evanston, where during those twenty-five years, the church grew from a small parish of two hundred, to one of the largest churches in Evanston, with a membership of over 2,000 communicants.

Bishop George Craig Stewart, D.D.

As a result of this growth, the great Pro-Cathedral was built, with assets totaling over a million dollars. For several years Bishop Stewart was professor of Homiletics at Seabury-Western Theological Seminary, Evanston. Bishop Stewart is an energetic, forceful preacher, and has won high accord for his earnest and sincere and human presentation of Christian truth.

Bishop Stewart comes to New Lenox as a great Churchman, and leader of the third largest Episcopal Diocese in the United States. Grace church and New Lenox is indeed fortunate in having so outstanding a guest visit them.

Accompanying Bishop Stewart will be the Venerable Norman B. Quigg, Archdeacon of the Diocese.

The Rev. Albert H. Olson, is Vicar of Grace church.

Destroyed by Fire

Fire of unknown origin broke out in a chicken house on the property of O. R. Andrews in the Lincoln Estates at five o'clock Sunday afternoon. The Frankfort Fire Department was called, but the building which was 60x20 feet was beyond saving and quickly burned to the ground. The dwelling was saved.

Radio, Weary of Public's Complaints, Hires John Q. and Makes Him Censor

By GORDON GREENWOOD
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

NEW YORK.—The "fickle" public, which everybody tries so hard to understand, positively knows what it wants on the radio.

If there was some doubt on this point 20 years ago, in broadcasting's infancy, the fog is now completely dispelled. Not only do listeners register their reactions and complaints immediately, but they take the most direct approach—and talk straight from the shoulder.

A radio network's telephone switchboard works like a sounding board of public opinion, bouncing back the public reaction even before the program in question is off the air.

Words spoken in absolute innocence may precipitate minor chaos. For instance, a newscaster once told his listeners a certain situation was "like having the gas turned off on Thanksgiving day with your house full of guests." Within a few minutes irate telephoners were calling the National Broadcasting company to know why their gas would be turned off! (It was near Thanksgiving.)

Censor Rule Enforced.

After analyzing letters and protests from over the country, NBC has established a "you-can't-broadcast-that" rule for what appears to be slander, unverified reports, invasion of privacy and vulgarity. The entire radio industry generally follows the same rule.

Thus radio officials believe they have avoided censorship, not invoked it. As between strict government censorship and voluntary control from within, the industry much prefers the latter.

Behind every policy hangs a story. One day A. A. Schechter, NBC's special events director, received a "flash" that a passenger plane flying the Atlantic had not been heard from for several hours.

"Don't broadcast that," he told the news editor. His wisdom of self-restraint was clear 30 minutes later when a second bulletin announced that all was well aboard the plane.

Try to Avoid Confusion.

Suppose the first bulletin had been broadcast. The sudden and emphatic reaction would have been sorrow for some people. The second bulletin would have confused the situation, in addition to causing doubt about the veracity of broadcast reports. Nor was there assurance that everyone who heard the first bulletin would also hear the second.

MAN WITH BLUE PENCIL—A. A. Schechter, director of NBC's special events department. It's his job to look for potential dynamite as part of radio's program of self-censorship.

The wide panic following the famous Orson Welles "Mars" broadcast was an error of listening. Had the alarmists listened 15 minutes or more they would have heard the announcement that Welles was broadcasting a dramatization, not live hot news.

Schechter's wariness over tragedy reports dates back to the time a newscaster "flashed" an announcement from Hanover, N. H., saying nine Dartmouth college students had been killed by carbon monoxide gas in a fraternity house. This was certainly news. NBC's telephones handled hundreds of calls from distressed parents who wanted to know names. But none were available, and with 1,500 students enrolled at Dartmouth there was a lot of re-assuring to do.

Guided by Experience.

That's the behind-the-scenes part of radio policy, and it's why broadcast news may withhold important news for hours while details are awaited. Experience, not mere theory, dictates procedure.

An analysis of protests show the Midwest shows stronger distaste for off-color humor and anti-religious dogmas than any other part of the country. The South demands high regard for womanhood and male chivalry. The Northwest sounds the praises of rugged individualism. North central states ask a progressive social outlook and New York city examines everything with the mind of an Old world critic.

Radio men are convinced we receive different sensations from reading and listening. You may, for instance, read war atrocity stories without feeling bitter about them, but when you hear a word-of-mouth description backed by the emotional stimulus of the human voice, you may become exercised, even moved to positive action.

A three-hour time-zone difference between east and west coasts always finds somebody sitting down to a meal, and, generally speaking, people are pretty sensitive about what they hear at mealtimes.

So it's the listeners, not the government or the broadcasters, who lay down radio's program policies.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Reviewed by CARTER FIELD

Britain needs agricultural implements from the United States—how are they going to get them? . . . Washington folks are wondering how Secretary of War Woodring manages to hold onto his job . . . The most militant support the President is receiving in his arms embargo fight is coming from the senators he tried vigorously to purge.

WASHINGTON.—Britain will need a lot of agricultural implements from the United States, according to well-informed British sources here. No precise estimates have been made, they stated, but it will run to around $50,000,000.

The point is that the submarine menace, plus the airplane menace to merchant shipping, is now recognized as the most important factor in the whole war. It boils down to the question of whether the Germans can starve Britain or not—the same question that was so important in 1917.

Britain's agricultural acreage is now estimated at only 9,000,000. At the close of the World war at least 3,000,000 acres were under cultivation for food, which are now idle. Actually, some experts think the acreage could be pushed up to 15,000,000. This seems doubtful to American experts here, not because of any special knowledge they have on the situation but because they are convinced that Britain pretty nearly went the limit in cultivating idle ground capable of food production in the closing years of the World war.

But to put land under cultivation, which has not been used for crops for 20 years, requires more machinery, per acre, than land which has been continuously in production, for obvious reasons. And there has been very little replacement because the number of acres cultivated in Britain has been shrinking.

Then the Joker Appears

In the Hiram Johnson Act

Now for the joker! The British who are talking about all this in Washington are wondering how they can get around the Hiram Johnson act, and finance these purchases of agricultural machinery in the United States. One plan being considered is to organize a corporation to be called the British-American Agricultural Implement company, or something of the sort. It would presumably be a private company, and intended to make a profit out of buying and selling agricultural machinery — on time. It would buy the machinery from the implement manufacturers, paying cash, and sell the implements in Britain, on credit, the ostensible intention being that when the debts were paid by the British farmers there would be a nice profit on the whole transaction.

Actually, however, the stock would not be offered with much of a profit sales talk. It could be circularized without running afoul of securities and exchange commission regulations, because there would be no glittering promises held out.

The appeal would be almost exclusively to persons who would, were it not for the Johnson act, be buying British bonds, more to make a contribution to British success, or against Hitler, than to make money. The idea would also be to keep the British government as far away from the whole affair, officially, as possible, though actually the desire for a private blessing from the British government would be strong.

But the most interesting phase of the whole business is not that American farm machinery makers may get a little business, or that there may be loopholes in the Johnson act, but that certain elements in Britain already realize that the biggest question in the whole war is whether or not Britain can be starved.

They Wonder How Secretary

Woodring Retains His Job

For a long time, whenever a group of New Dealers were discussing personalities in the administration in a social gathering, provided of course that certain persons were not present, one would hear wonder that Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring could not take a hint. Why, the New Dealers would ask, didn't the Kansans realize that he simply did not fit into the picture, and resign? If one listened to them and believed, one would be convinced that the only reason President Roosevelt did not throw Woodring out on his ear was that Roosevelt's heart was too soft. He could not bear to hurt the feelings of anyone at once close to him and loyal.

So long as Woodring's father-in-law, Marcus A. Coolidge, had a vote in the senate, this was generally thrown in as another explanation. Especially as everyone in Washington knew that Senator Coolidge had old-fashioned ideas about two and two making four, and distrusted—from a long and successful business experience—many of the New Deal economic theories.

But Coolidge's term expired, and young Henry Cabot Lodge took his place, so this theory had to be abandoned. Thereupon an entirely new explanation, in addition to the President's hatred of saying unkind things to his friends, was evolved. This was that the President and Mrs. Roosevelt were very fond of Mrs. Woodring, Senator Coolidge's daughter, and wanted to keep her in Washington's official life!

Be that as it may, and nobody would deny that the Woodrings are a couple of delightful people, the New Dealers, up to a very short time ago, were all for throwing Woodring out and all for putting Louis A. Johnson, assistant secretary of war, in his place. So, it might be said, was Louis Johnson.

Things Happen Here and There and Changes Result

But things happened abroad, and many things at home have changed as a result. The New Dealers no longer want Woodring thrown out. Certainly they do not want him thrown out if Louis Johnson is to take his place. They play up now the alleged rows between Woodring and Johnson, but always with the thought now that such "insubordination" should not be tolerated!

The answer is simple. Louis Johnson is one of the men in the administration who believes that the United States should be prepared—just in case—for war. So far many of the left wingers agree with him. But to their horror the New Dealers discovered that Johnson's pet war industries board had prepared a lot of plans for mobilizing industry in the event of war which apparently had no thought whatever of social and economic reform.

They were based on the idea of co-ordinating and expanding existing privately owned industries. Not a word about nationalization of the electric industry, or government munitions plants. Apparently the war and navy departments were not so much interested in preventing anyone from making a profit as they were in getting what they needed!

Proves Adage That Politics

Makes Strange Bedfellows

It is a perfect demonstration of the old adage that politics makes strange bedfellows that the most militant support President Roosevelt is receiving in his fight to repeal the embargo on the sale of "arms, ammunition and implements of war" to belligerents is coming from the very senators the President tried so vigorously, but unsuccessfully, to liquidate in 1938.

It was Sen. Millard E. Tydings of Maryland against whom the President not only backed David J. Lewis but actually invaded the state and spoke for him, who told peace at any price hecklers just what he thought of them. The two most important gains the pro-repeal side made were Senators Walter F. George of Georgia and Ellison D. (Cotton Ed) Smith of South Carolina, who triumphed over the purge despite the utmost efforts of the "janisaries." Incidentally, the President spoke in both Georgia and South Carolina in that campaign.

Leaders of the conservative Southern Democrats, that group which is more distasteful to the Corcorans and the Cohens than anything except the electric utility magnates, are Senators Carter Glass and Harry F. Byrd of Virginia. Neither of them happened to come up for reelection in 1938, or they would certainly have been subjected to a purge primary. As it was, a New Dealer, William E. Dodd Jr., ran against a Byrd congressman in the Alexandria district, and was defeated three to one, while a New Dealer was unseated in another primary that year by a Byrd organization candidate for the house.

Foes Assist President In His Toughest Battle

Glass and Byrd are both enthusiastically for repeal of the arms embargo. So is Sen. Edward R. Burke of Nebraska, who also did not have to face a primary in 1938, but comes up for re-election next year. It had been figured that Burke would certainly be marked for slaughter, and might have great difficulty, what with Sen. George W. Norris and the administration both against him. But now Burke fought side by side with Uncle George and supported the President in one of the toughest battles the White House has staged on Capitol Hill.

Of course all the "me too" boys are with the President. But they always are, and hence do not rate much credit. It's the man who helped you last in politics who seems the most important—not the man who helped you two years ago, and never the man who has always been with you. Especially if the man who helped you last came as an almost unhelped for and unexpected addition to the force you were contemplating.

What is all this going to do to the campaign next year? Most politicians figure that the President intends to run again.

Line an 8-inch plate with pastry. Sprinkle flour over bottom crust and add maple syrup. Top with whole raw cranberries. Cover with pastry, press edges together and brush top of crust with milk. Bake in hot oven, 400° Fahrenheit—about 40 minutes.

Swiss Watch Ramparts Again, Ready to Ward Off Attacks Against 142-Year Neutrality

BERNE.—Little Switzerland, whose neutrality has been preserved and respected 124 years in the face of repeated warfare on all its frontiers, is once more watching its ramparts.

On every frontier well-armed troops stand guard to ward off belligerent planes or stop a sudden attack.

Though aged and peaceful, Switzerland is not missing any bets. Her defenses are up-to-the-minute, giving protection against any modern weapon a foe may send against her. Typical is the fortress system surrounding her entire frontier, the novel automatic tank barriers which shoot out from Swiss highways at the press of a button, and her keen-eyed anti-aircraft battalions which are rated among the world's best.

New Border Threats.

Time was when Switzerland worried only about her northern and southern frontiers, bordering on Germany and Switzerland. But the Nazi juggernaut captured Austria, so the resourceful Swiss fortified on the east. Then, just for good measure, they arranged protection against any possible threat from France.

Swiss army organization is at once the world's most unique and most efficient. Voluntary frontier troops, organized in independent companies and highly mobile with their horses, bicycles and trucks, are assigned to ward off surprise attacks until regular army units can reach their positions.

At the moment of invasion, every man belongs to the army. Youngsters climb into alpine positions and oldsters take easier jobs in keeping with their individual capabilities.

Men Fully Equipped.

Mobilization is lightning fast. Only in a democracy like this can every soldier keep his complete outfit at home, ammunition excepted. Cavalrymen have their horses and cyclists their bicycles. Equipment is checked periodically under a severe control system.

When mobilization is called, it can thus be made an actuality within a few days, or even a few hours if necessary. "Light brigades," which consist of cavalry, cyclists, light artillery on trucks and machine guns on motors, form the vanguard of the army and may be thrown into a defense post at a moment's notice.

One thing worries the Swiss—their electrified railroads, which could be decommissioned in a few hours with well-placed bombs. Hence the army's infantry units and their arsenals are widely decentralized to be within reach of a majority of men within a few hours.

Generals Are Scarce.

Only three times in its history has Switzerland had a military commander-in-chief. Under its constitution a supreme commander with powers over military and civil resources can be appointed only in times of general mobilization, and then only by election. Such a commander was General Dufour, who was commander-in-chief during the interior war in 1847; General Herzog, in power during the Franco-German war of 1870, and General Wille, commander from 1914 to 1918. There have been no others.

Between such emergencies the head of the Swiss military department is head of the army. He presides over the tongue-twisting Landesverteidigungskommission, or the board of national defense.

The Swiss are proud of their defense works. On the south they need worry chiefly about St. Gothard and the Simplon passes. The former is protected by fortresses which have always been kept up to date, cut into solid granite rocks. The Simplon entrance is through a tunnel which can easily be made impassable, and the road is guarded by a fort in the Gorge of Gondo.

"STUDS"—At a moment's notice, steel barricades can shoot up from these innocent-looking round spots on the Swiss highway, controlled by a concealed electric button.

Prologue to Love

SYNOPSIS

Lovely, independent Autumn Dean, returning home to British Columbia from abroad without her father's knowledge, stops at the home of Hector Cardigan, an old family friend. He tells her that she should not have come home, that things have changed. Arriving home at the "Castle of the Noms," she is greeted lovingly by her father, Jarvis Dean, who gives her to understand that she is welcome—for a short visit. Her mother, former belle named Millicent Odell, has been dead for years. Autumn cannot understand her father's attitude, though gives him to understand that she is home for good. She has grown tired of life in England, where she lived with an aunt. Riding around the estate with her father, Autumn realizes that he has changed.

CHAPTER II—Continued

When Autumn drew abreast of her father again, his face was oddly rigid and colorless. Hector Cardigan had been right, then. Her father had changed. He was not the man she had known in other years. He was getting old, and the burden of living had lain too heavily upon him. Her impatience with his mood melted to pity as she thought of him. "By the way, father, how are the Landors?" she asked casually, when they had ridden a short distance.

"Eh? The Landors? Ah—they're well, I presume," he said absently. "You told me at Christmas time that Mrs. Landor had been ill," she reminded him.

"Oh, yes, yes, of course," he said hastily. "Old Jane has been very low. She's not long for this world, I'm afraid."

"And Bruce?"

But Jarvis had fixed his eyes suddenly on a straggling bunch of frail new weeds close to the trail. He dismounted abruptly and pulled the grasses up by the roots.

"Milk vetch," he remarked, and got back into the saddle.

When they arrived at the camp, old Absalom was in his shack, brewing coffee and frying bacon. While her father went indoors, Autumn lingered for a moment outside, her eyes sweeping the rounded skyline above her, where the morning sun was burnishing the hills. The snug little valley into which she had ridden was filled with the bleat of ewes and the tiny cry of hundreds of newborn lambs. On the sunlit slope above her, the main flocks grazed, ewes with their lambs old enough to be released from the pens, or ewes which had not yet dropped their young.

Jarvis Dean's voice called to her from the doorway of the shack. There was old Absalom Peek, grown more wizened and gnome-like than ever, his weathered face contorted in a shy grin. He held the screen door open and she ran up to him.

"Hello, Absalom!" she called.

He shook hands with her, his old eyes beaming and watering with delight.

"Welcome home, Miss Autumn!" he said, achieving a gallant little jerk of a bow. "You've been gone a long time. But a fine young lady they've made of you, I see."

Autumn laughed and glanced at her father who stood by, tall and elegant in his riding clothes, smiling indulgently down upon his old herder.

"I've been gone too long, Absalom," Autumn said. "But I'm home for good now, and I'll be over to see you often."

"We'll be makin' for the hills right after shearin'," Absalom told her. "In about another fortnight."

"Stay and visit with Absalom while I go out and look over the new family," Jarvis said, starting for the corral. "Come along when you feel like it."

Autumn entered the shack and seated herself while Absalom tended to his coffee and bacon.

"It'll be like old times havin' you back at the Castle, Miss Autumn," the old herder said. "You'll be puttin' new life into the old place."

"Perhaps the old place could stand a little new life," Autumn replied.

Absalom turned to her with the frying pan in one hand, then glanced quickly through the doorway.

"And I'm telling you it could stand a lot of it," he said. "You never saw such a place as that's got to be. The Laird's a great man, an' still hearty for a man of his years, mind you, but there's need of someone about the house there besides that poor old body that does the cookin' and the cleanin'." In the old days we used to have a bit of a dance now an' then, or something to keep a man from gettin' old before his time—but yon's a morgue, gettin' to be."

"You give me an idea, Absalom," Autumn said. "It isn't every day in the year that a daughter comes home. I'm going to celebrate. I'm going to invite the whole countryside to a dance. Will you come? We couldn't give a party without you."

"We'll be leavin' in another fortnight," he reminded her.

"We'll make it next Friday night, then."

Absalom's face lighted up with enormous pleasure. "I'll come, right enough, if I can get away to it. But ye'll promise to put on a few of the old dances, mind. I'm gettin' too stiff in the j'ints for the stuff they call dancin' nowadays."

Autumn laughed. "If some of the youngsters today tried your reels, Absalom, they'd have to be carried off the floor."

"Aye, that's right enough, too. But who'll ye be askin' now?"

"Everybody!" Autumn replied.

The old fellow's eyes became dreamy with reminiscence. "I've had many a good turn in my time with Katie Macdougall, down at The Bend—if ye'll think of it to ask her," he suggested archly.

"We'll send her a special invitation, Absalom," Autumn promised, getting up. "I'd better leave you to your coffee, now, while I go and take a look at the lambs."

"Aye, an' they're worth lookin' at. Nigh unto five hundred was dropped durin' the night."

Autumn went out and found her father beside one of the pens that opened off the corral. Within it a large, robust ewe stood in maternal dignity, while about her pranced a day-old lamb on its ridiculous legs, flicking an absurd cottony tail.

Autumn laughed in sheer delight. "Oh, you little rascal!" she said. "I'll have to learn about sheep all over again, Da."

She glanced up at him and noted the wistful eagerness that came into his eyes, and the quick, unaccountable restraint that immediately masked them.

He sighed heavily. "It's no business for a woman, my girl."

"That's a man's opinion, Da," she countered.

"And it's my opinion that a woman can talk a lot of damned nonsense, given the chance," her father retorted. "With the help of God, I'll be out of the business myself before another year."

"Out of sheep-raising?"

"I'm going to sell," he told her. Autumn caught her breath with dismay. "Now who is talking nonsense? You'd die without all this—you know you would."

One of the sheep dogs, a graceful collie, came bounding up to them and Jarvis stooped to pat him. "I know, I know. But I'm getting too old for it, Autumn."

They moved to another pen and Autumn laid her hand affectionately on her father's arm. "I never heard anything so absurd in my life," she said, then decided to turn the conversation into another channel. "Now, that ewe, Da, is a Rambouillet, isn't it?"

Jarvis smiled appreciatively, drawn out in spite of himself. "I sent you to Europe to forget all that," he mused aloud. "But it's little you can do with a woman, it seems."

With a lighter heart, Autumn mounted her horse and rode beside her father up the steep trail that led back to the highway.

It was ten years or more since the Laird had opened his wide doors to the purposes of merry-making, and people had come from as far away as Kelowna to welcome his daughter's homecoming. The drawing room and the hall thundered with the lusty measures of a Highland schottische; Old Country folk stamped resolutely on the polished floors—middle-aged and elderly Scots, their gnarled faces scarlet and streaming, swung their partners with the earnestness of warriors going into battle. Not the least conspicuous and nimble-footed, and certainly the most terrifying of all, was old Absalom Peek, whose flaming red necktie rested companionably on the shoulder of his partner, Katie Macdougall.

Autumn stood near the doorway and applauded the efforts of the old sheep-herder, who beamed his gratitude and pursued his course more desperately than ever.

When the dance came to an end and the exhausted performers scattered to find chairs or to go out into the evening, two or three of the younger men hurried toward Autumn. One took her peremptorily by the arm and drew her aside.

"The next dance is ours, Miss Dean," he informed her a little complacently. "I have asked the orchestra to favor us with a tango."

Florian Parr was reputed to be the most dashing young man of the countryside. The Parrs, a wealthy Scotch family with a ranch in the Okanagan Valley, had left their son in England to complete his education and had brought him out a year after Autumn had left to join her Aunt Flo in the Old Country. Her father had introduced him to Autumn earlier in the evening and her eyes had surveyed him, with a penetration subtly careless, from head to foot. He was just under thirty, blond, tall, firmly knit, and dressed in white flannels and impeccably tailored blue sack coat. In that amusing medley of rustics and bland sophisticates who were her father's friends, Florian Parr stood out like a man from another world.

His manner was an immediate challenge to Autumn. "Our dance, Mr. Parr? I cannot recall making any engagements."

He stepped closer to her. "It is not so much a matter of engagement, Miss Dean, as it is a matter of preference."

She laughed. "Yours—or mine, Mr. Parr?"

"I can only speak for myself," he replied.

She wrinkled her nose at him. "You seem to find little difficulty in that."

"Are you going to make this awkward?" he countered.

Autumn chuckled softly. "Not at all, Mr. Parr. Besides, I should think a man who plays polo and pilots his own plane—"

"A splendid alliteration," he put in. Before she could reply, he had swung her out upon the floor. The orchestra had already begun to play. The crystal chandeliers of the drawing room were turned off, and immediately the long floor was a dim pool of violet light from the colored lanterns that had been strung below the ceiling. Autumn noted the eyes that followed herself and Florian, shadowed eyes of envy or of admiration, and overheard one or two comments that were unequivocal. She permitted herself to drift in the joy of the dance, glancing up at her partner now and then with that rare, long look of half-closed eyes that is the piquant complement of that most subtly articulate of dances.

In the encore that followed the tango, Florian maneuvered so that they became separate from the main body of the dancers, and moved through the open French windows, out across the piazza and down the steps into the garden.

Florian leaned above her with one elbow resting on the bough of the tree. She saw him smile as he lifted a lock of her hair and pretended to peer at the moon through its mesh.

"Mr. Parr," she said, with mock severity, "I must remind you that "It isn't every day in the year that a daughter comes home."

I am hostess this evening—and must be treated with the dignity due my position."

"You might also add that we met for the first time not more than an hour ago," he said.

"I do."

"But it has been an unforgettable hour," he responded.

Another couple strolled by in the moonlight.

"Look here," Florian said suddenly. "Why can't you come down for the week-end in Kelowna soon? The family will be keen on you. They've all heard about you from your father. My sister Linda wanted terribly to come up tonight, but she had a sprained ankle. She'd be crazy about you."

"I should love to come," Autumn assured him.

"I'll tell you what," he suggested. "Drop down for the polo game a week from tomorrow and stay over Sunday. I promise you a good time. Your father owes my governor a visit too. He hasn't been down for months. Let's make a real party of it."

"I'll speak to father about it."

"Right!" he said.

"Let's go back, Mr. Parr," Autumn remarked. "I'm forgetting my duties."

"I'll come if you'll call me Florian," he stipulated, in a voice so low and engaging that it brought her throaty, pleased laughter.

"Very well, Florian," she responded, and they retraced their way to the brilliantly lighted house.

The music floated to them when they mounted the steps to the piazza that was completely festooned with honeysuckle in sweet and heady bloom. Florian caught her arm.

"Let's finish this dance before we go in," he said, and drew her lightly away on the rhythm of the waltz that was being played.

The piazza was in darkness, away from the moon, and as they waltzed to the farther end of it, they found themselves alone. There Florian paused, drew her close and brushed her hair with his lips.

"I think I'm going to love you," he whispered.

Autumn's lips and cheeks glowed faintly, and she experienced the old, swift sensation of being deliciously drugged. Then, for some unaccountable reason, she thought of her mother, Millicent, whom she could recall only as a dream, and of that other Odell woman, known only as a myth, the woman who had been her grandmother. She thought then of men in England and men on the Continent, whom she had played with until they merely bored her. One especially she remembered—a blue-eyed youth who had been maimed in the war. The Odell women had been no respecters of hearts, old Hector had said. The Basque bell! She winced suddenly and drew away from Florian. Was it for this, then, she had left behind her that life she had lived for the past nine years?

Casually, and without a word, she led Florian back into the rectangle of light from the open French windows, and a moment later they were among the dancers in the drawing room.

When the waltz had ended, Autumn spoke a quiet word to her father and slipped away up the rear stairs to her own room.

Autumn knew not what mad impulse had possessed her to desert her father's guests and come out here to be alone on the silver-lit range. In her own room it had taken only a minute or two to change into her riding clothes, steal down again and out to the stables where she had saddled her horse, and come galloping away under the pallor of the night. Some yearning for escape, she knew, had prompted her act. She realized now that she had run away from Florian Parr. It was from the Florian Parrs she had run when she had left that shallow life she had known in Europe—the Florian Parrs, in whom deep passions were merely quaint and laughable.

She was well within the Landor ranch before she realized the direction she had taken. She had been sitting there for minutes, breathing deeply of the night's enchanted perfume, when a sound behind her caused her to draw sharply on the reins and wheel her horse about. Another rider was coming down the narrow trail, his form looming black and high against the moon.

"Hello, there!" a man's voice challenged her, a level voice, unhurried, its intonation rich and deep. As he drew closer Autumn could see that he was bareheaded, dressed in riding breeches and the collar of his dark shirt carelessly open.

"I am Autumn Dean," she announced quickly, as he came alongside her and halted his horse.

Although the moonlight made an obscure mask of his features, she thought she saw a look of puzzled surprise cross them.

"Autumn Dean!" he exclaimed, and extended his hand.

"Why—Bruce Landor! It is you, isn't it?"

Above their clasped hands, Autumn saw his smile—the boyish, quizzical smile she remembered.

"I was sure it was you—at once," he told her.

A thrill of uneasiness coursed through her—a queer, unsteady feeling that left her ridiculously irritated at herself.

"Why didn't you say so, then?" she demanded.

He held her hand warmly and smiled at her. "I have learned to take nothing for granted," he observed. "But—I understood you were celebrating over at your place tonight. How do you happen to be here?"

"I don't believe I could even explain that myself," she said a little blankly. "I just rode away, and—I'm here."

He smiled again and took a cigarette from his breast pocket, struck a match and lighted it between his cupped hands. In that one brief moment she saw the dark, crisply curling hair that was cropped short, straight dark brows rather heavy above eyes that she remembered now were a deep blue, a nose well-formed and sensitive about the nostrils, and a mouth that was somewhat full but straight-drawn and obstinate. In the sudden realization that she was giving him a shameless scrutiny, she wrenched her gaze away in the instant that he looked up at her.

"I had expected to see you over at our dance tonight," Autumn said. "Or were you not the least bit curious?"

"Curious?" He regarded her intently. "Scarcely—curious. I should have come if I had been able. This happens to be a very busy time for me—and besides, mother has taken another bad spell."

"Oh, I'm very sorry. Father told me she had been quite ill. I should have been over to see her if I had had time. Do you think she would remember me, Bruce?"

His eyes rested gravely upon her face. Her hand moved nervously to her cheek as his look held hers, the moonlight seeming to go thin and extraordinarily translucent between them.

"I doubt it," he said at last. "You are grown-up now."

"Won't you take me down to see her?"

"Now?"

"Why not? It's still early, and I can ride back that way. Unless, of course, she's asleep."

"She never goes to sleep until I come in," Bruce told her.

"I should love to go down, then," she said.

Bruce glanced once in the direction of the ravine. "I can come back here later," he said. "Let us go this way, then."

He led the way across the slope to a point from which the light in the Landor house was plainly visible.

"I hope you will not be shocked at mother's condition," he said. "She has had a stroke, you know, and it has left her partially paralyzed. She may not even remember your name."

"What a pity," Autumn said. "She was always such a proud, capable woman."

THE CITIZENS OF THE KINGDOM

LESSON TEXT—Matthew 5:1-16.
GOLDEN TEXT—Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven.—Matthew 5:16.

Great and historic discourses are preserved with care and are read by succeeding generations with profit and interest even though they are recognized to be the utterances of weak and fallible men. The lesson before us presents what is "undoubtedly the greatest single discourse ever uttered by any teacher or statesman or philosopher in the whole history of the human race" (Smith). Take up your Bible and read the words of the text.

These verses are addressed to believers, to those who have actually taken Christ as king of their lives. These beatitudes are not a substitute for the gospel. They are not laws that the unbeliever can keep and thus be saved, for this would be utterly impossible for anyone to do, except the one who has been born again. Only he who knows and has called upon the power and grace of God in Christ can qualify to walk as a citizen of His kingdom.

I. The Christian's King (vv. 1, 2).

The words which fell from the blessed lips of the Lord Jesus on that day as He sat on the mountain-side were not the powerless declarations of an earthly philosopher or statesman, but of the Son of God who had humbled Himself and become the Son of Man who was still the King of kings and the Lord of lords. If you have not given glad and free allegiance to Him, do it now and you will then be ready to go on and learn of the Christian's character and influence which may be your possession in Christ.

II. The Christian's Character (vv. 3-12).

The eight characteristics of the Christian here presented are worthy of extended individual attention, but we can offer only brief suggestions.

"Blessed are the poor in spirit" speaks of humility as a commendable quality. How contradictory the present-day philosophy which calls for self-assertion and self-reliance. But Jesus is not mistaken. The way into the kingdom of heaven is not that of assertive self-sufficiency.

"Blessed are they that mourn." The world does not believe that statement. It shuns the house of mourning. It tries without avail to philosophize away the fact of sorrow. The Christian, on the other hand, feels with his fellow man and thus receives a blessing.

"I walked a mile with Pleasure. She chattered all the way; But left me none the wiser. For all she had to say."

"I walked a mile with Sorrow, And ne'er a word said she; But, oh, the things I learned from her When Sorrow walked with me."

"Blessed are the meek." Ah, yes, poverty of spirit comes when a man rightly sees himself, and has a sympathetic touch with sorrow. Then he "inherits the earth," because he truly comes to enjoy it as a place of service and Christian growth, and not because he has a deed to a single foot of its soil.

"Note that it is the hunger and thirst for righteousness, and not the possession of it, that is blessed" (Plummer). Self-satisfied people know nothing of the glory of having such a hunger and thirst filled by God.

Time fails us to speak of the Christian's spirit of mercy which invites divine mercy; that purity of heart and absolute cleanness of mind and sincerity of purpose which enable a man really to see God even in this impure world; that Christlike spirit which makes him a peacemaker in a fighting world—yes, that spirit which makes him like the Master in sweetly bearing unjustified persecution. These indeed are the marks of the man who follows Christ as King.

III. The Christian's Influence (vv. 13-16).

"Salt" and "light"! What pungent and powerful folk are the real followers of Christ!

Salt fights against rotteness, keeps things sweet and fresh. Dr. J. H. Jowett says, Christians "are to confront rotteness in politics; they are to meet it in the realm of business; they are to make for it in the field of sport; they are to be its enemies in the crowded streets of common intercourse; they are to defeat it in the quiet and sequestered ways of art and literature; everywhere they are to provide the antidote to corruption, and they are to overcome and destroy it."

Light has one function, namely, to illuminate. Wickedness and sin always love darkness, because their deeds are evil (read John 3:19-21). If Christ really dwells in us we cannot help but shed light about us wherever we go—a divine light which drives out the darkness of sin, of ignorance, of superstition, and replaces it with the sunlight of God.

Ask Me Another A General Quiz

The Questions

1. Does an octopus have eight arms or eight legs?
2. What year follows 1 B. C.?
3. How far apart are the bases on a baseball diamond?
4. What name is given to a native of Paris? Venice? Naples?
5. How much dirt in a hole 3 feet square and 3 feet deep?
6. What and where was the Boxer rebellion?
7. Which is heavier, an ounce of gold or an ounce of feathers?

The Answers

1. Eight tentacles. Generally referred to as arms, though the name octopus comes from a Greek word meaning eight legs.
2. 1 A. D.
3. The bases form a 90 foot square.
4. Parisian. Venetian. Neapolitan.
5. The dirt has been removed.
6. An anti-foreign demonstration in China in 1900 led by the Chinese society known as the Boxers.
7. As gold is usually computed in Troy weight, and feathers in avoirdupois, an ounce of gold would be about 10 per cent heavier.

Because Billie Swisher was two years old last week, he invited six little playmates and their mothers to his birthday party. Grandmothers Funk and Swisher, had a heap of fun too, as they watched the changing expressions of joy on the happy little faces around the table where goodies prepared by Billie's mother were enjoyed by all. Billie thanked all his little friends (in his own way) for the nice gifts he received, which Jacklyn Messenbrink sang lustily "Happy Birthday to you."

The card and bunco party sponsored by the R. N. A. last week was a big success and a "hearty thank you" go out to all who made it so. Mrs. Murphy and Keleher were the lucky winners of the olsen rugs and Mrs. Tummelson of Chicago went home with the door prize, a basket of groceries.

Tuesday night was Past oracles and charter member night, at the Chicago Heights camp and eight of the Tinley Park camp attended as guests. Those who attended were, Mesdames Chapman, Brown, Nana-macher, Clemens, Aikens, Orcutt, H. Johnston and Hirsch. They report a delightful time.

Thursday Mrs. Walter Mauck entertained the Smiling Thru Bunn Club.

Mrs. Frank Baldwin, Garden Chairman attended the State meeting of Garden department heads, held at Headquarters on October second.

Mrs. Baldwin's group met in her home October 10th. It was a most delightful meeting.

Mrs. W. W. Kester, our president, was a guest of the Brainard and the Blue Island Clubs initial meetings for the year 1939 & 40. They were very pleasant occasions of course.

The music Department of our local Club met on Thursday evening October 12th with Mrs. Anna Hirsch as hostess. If you are a club woman and interested in the charm and spiritual values of music come to the same place Thursday evening, October 26th at 7:30. Lend your enthusiasm to the success of this delightful way of leisure in life.

The American Home Department met at the home of the Chairman Mrs. Erna Wallen on Friday, October 13th. Plans for the year were discussed and some plans formulated. Watch the Club calendar for the next meeting and come if you are interested. You will be made welcome.

General Meeting of the Tinley Park Woman's Club is October 25th. Mrs. Anna Hirsch hostess. Each member may invite a guest.

Dr. Pling R. Blodgett of Chicago Heights will be the guest speaker. His topic is "Socialization of Medicine." The music treat will be vocal music. Mrs. Otto Jobson singing with Mrs. M. J. Rensink, accompanist.

The Club day begins at 10:30 A. M. Mrs. Harry Dean will lead in the study of our American language and Mrs. R. C. Hannum in literature and the Reading Circle studies. The "Personal History" of Vincent Sheehan and his very successful story "Not Peace but a Sword" will constitute the special interest for the day. Mrs. J. Jaeger, Third District Chairman of Literature, is expected as a guest.

The business meeting at 1:30 and the general meeting at 2. Mrs. George Rowden who is traveling thru the south and southwest writes that she paid a surprise visit to Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Wyman at San Antonio, Texas.

The Public Service Company has a force of men engaged here this week setting new poles.

Mr. and Mrs. Forest Rice who have been residing in the old C. Andres place, have moved to Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. Dick Swisher who returned Thursday from their wedding trip, have moved into the Andres residence vacated by the Rice's.

A host of relatives and friends celebrated the silver wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Henke a week ago Sunday in the St. John Lutheran Church hall in Chicago Heights. There were 175 guests present. Rev. Mr. Meyer, pastor of the Coopers Grove Lutheran Church gave an appropriate address to the honored couple.

Clarence Prebtsel who has been heard on radio programs, sang several songs. The honored couple were presented with beautiful and useful silver gifts.

Wm. Schellhase, Sr., was the victim of a very tragic accident the past week when he fell from a ladder while painting a building on his farm in Frankfort township, and in the fall broke both ankles. He is confined to his home with the broken members in a cast.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Mager have returned from Kansas City where they have been visiting with their son Stanley.

Tinley Park is getting to be quite a shipping point for live stock, four carloads of hogs being shipped from here the past week.

The peat bog fire which has been burning for weeks on the Fulton farm north of here is still burning deep underground. Harlem avenue has been closed to traffic as the fire is burning underneath the road. The past week an effort has been made to check the fire but without much results. About 25 years ago this same bog caught fire and burned for sometime.

The Community Firemen's Association will hold their next regular meeting at Thornton on Monday night, October 23rd at 8 P. M.

FRANKFORT

We wish to thank the Frankfort Fire Department and our many friends for their prompt assistance in saving our home and other buildings Sunday evening when our chicken house burned and greatly appreciate the fine neighborly spirit. Mr. and Mrs. O. R. Andrews, Keene Ave. Estates Subdivision.

Due to an error in the School Treasurer's report of Frankfort township published recently in this paper, the figures that should have appeared in the column "Text Books and Stationery" appeared under the column "Interest on Teachers' Orders."

The only school district in the township that had interest on Teachers orders was District 159, interest amounting to $120.28, therefore, under "Text Books and Stationery" the amounts expended by the different districts were as follows: Dis. 154—$67.48, 155—$39.30, 156—$55.62, 156A—$20.46, 157—$177.19, 158—$16.45, 159—$120.02, 161—$160.79.

MOKENA

Mrs. Susan Smith has returned to her home after spending five months with her daughter, Mrs. Ebert at Oak Park. Mrs. Smith is in good health at the age of eighty-nine years.

Miss Alma Stamer and daughter Wilma of Chicago were guests at the Adolph Steen home on Sunday.

Printing Industry Celebrates 300th Anniversary

This year, in various parts of the country and in various manners, the 300th anniversary of the printing industry is being celebrated. Like other events of the sort, it will give rise among a certain group to the usual criticism that anniversaries and special celebrations are a waste of time and a weariness of the flesh.

There is one important point that these nay-sayers miss in occasions like the present anniversary of printing. It is the fact that these occasions offer an excellent opportunity to remind ourselves of humanity's record of constructive accomplishment. Here, in this country at this particular time, we ought to pay particular attention to these matters, in which the United States stands pre-eminent.

Let's look at the printing industry in America for a moment. Its record, typical of so many American industries large and small which have opened up new jobs, new payrolls, and lower cost products through increased use of machinery, is worthy of celebration.

Back in 1880, before the extensive use of modern machinery in the industry, there were 58,506 employees in printing, according to the census. In 1886 the linotype machine was invented. It was followed by a number of other improvements which cut the costs of printing and permitted its wider use, and as a result it is estimated that today there are more than 450,000 employees in the industry, with a payroll of more than three-quarters of a billion dollars.

That record of jobs, payrolls, and more enjoyable living for Americans strikes us as being worth an anniversary celebration any time!

Republican Party Stands for Peace

"The Republican Party has ever been the party of peace, and it is today the most influential instrumentality for keeping the United States out of the current World War," declared George F. Barrett, Republican candidate for Attorney General of Illinois, in an address delivered before a neutrality rally at 727 West North Avenue last night.

"In 1916," said Barrett, "the Republican campaign was presented to the nation as a program of peace and neutrality. We were then, as we are today, the peace party. The Democratic Party in that campaign won re-election for Wilson on the slogan 'Peace with honor. He kept us out of war.' Strangely enough, even during the campaign it was their plan to enter the war, and it was only 38 days after his inauguration that we were actually in that war. Today this administration does not even attempt to conceal its war-like attitude.

"The President and his fire-eaters have been and are bringing us to the brink of war. Mr. Roosevelt's Chicago 'quarantine' speech, Secretary Ickes' name calling, the 'frontier' on the Rhine incident, the French government's access to some of our most valuable military secrets, the shifting of the fleet from the Atlantic to the Pacific (so that we can patrol English possessions there, while Britannia's fleet is occupied with Germany), the recall of our Ambassador to Germany, the detention of the Bremen in New York Harbor, and the daily denunciations by administration spokesmen are certainly warlike acts which will provoke important trouble and lead us into the war.

"There is still time to mind our own business and I say, let's do so."

A New Law

Section 1, Section 266 of Division 1 of "An Act to revise the law in relation to criminal jurisprudence," approved March 27th, 1874 as amended to read as follows:

Division 1 TRESPASS

266. (Extract) "Whoever wilfully or unnecessarily or without right enters any orchard, nursery, garden or farm land of another when a printed or written notice forbidding or prohibiting trespass in general or in any detail has been conspicuously posted or exhibited at the main entrance to such orchard, nursery, garden, farm premises or farm land, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than five dollars nor more than fifty dollars and in addition thereto may be imprisoned in the county jail for not more than six months."

Approved June 8th, 1939. (Ill. Rev. Stat. P. 1171)

State Auditor, Edward J. Barrett, states that few people have any idea of the monthly refund out of the gasoline tax that is paid each month to farmers, dry cleaners and owners of motor boats, airplanes, etc.

The Auditor's books show that the refund amounts to approximately $300,000 per month, and the average number of warrants per month is 12,000.

The appropriation made by the last Legislature was $7,000,000 for the two years.

Only motor vehicles that use the hard roads are subject to the tax.

How
THE DAVIDSONS
LICKED
THE 4 BIG JOBS
— WITH GAS!

"Things weren't always so pleasant for us, no-siree. For between our furnace and cooking cares, and our hot water and refrigeration problems, we had 4 big jobs staring us in the face every day... all day. But that's all past,

now. The way Gas has licked those 4 big jobs is nothing short of a miracle.

Millions of smart folks are getting wise—they let gas do the 4 big jobs... automatically and inexpensively."

1 GAS FOR WATER HEATING

"No more waiting, watching or disappointments now that we've got an automatic gas water heater. Just a turn of a faucet gives us plenty of piping hot water—instantly. Always ready, day or night, for a hundred and one household uses."

2 GAS FOR HOUSE HEATING

"We've said goodbye to furnace cares... thanks to clean, carefree Gas Heat. No more shoveling or worry—no ashes to haul—no soot or dirt. We fire the furnace from the easy chair by merely adjusting a thermostat on the wall."

3 GAS FOR REFRIGERATION

"There's never a peep from our handsome, silent Gas refrigerator. And no wonder, for it hasn't any moving parts to wear or make a noise. That means longer life and extra savings, too!"

4 GAS FOR COOKING

"We took one look at a modern C/P Gas Range and it almost won us on its looks alone. But when we discovered how it saved time, fuel and food, how it cooked foods better, faster, easier... then we knew that was the range we wanted."

I'LL TUNE OUT THE ALKA-SELTZER ANNOUNCEMENT

Don't—THAT'S THE MOST IMPORTANT THING YOU'LL HEAR TONIGHT

"When statements about Alka-Seltzer are made over the air, please, please believe them."

Mrs. Oma Catherine Jones

MILLIONS suffer less from Headache, Acid Indigestion, Distress of Colds "Morning After" and Muscular Fatigue because they have heard—and believed—Alka-Seltzer radio announcements. To these millions, the relief obtained by the use of Alka-Seltzer is worth far more than the genuine enjoyment they get from the broadcasts.

The most important parts of our radio program, both to you and to us, are the commercial announcements. Once you have tried Alka-Seltzer we believe you will agree with us.

But try Alka-Seltzer because it is an unusually effective medicine not because you enjoy the radio programs.

WHY ALKA-SELTZER IS SO EFFECTIVE

The pain-relieving analgesic in Alka-Seltzer is in complete solution, ready to ease the distress as soon as you swallow it. The pain-relieving action is made more effective by alkaline buffers. The alkalinizing elements in Alka-Seltzer reduce excess stomach acidity.

Get Alka-Seltzer the next time you pass a drug store.

Orland Woman's Club

On Thursday, October 12th the Orland Park Woman's Club held their meeting at the home of Mrs. Wm. H. Walker, Midlothian, who very graciously with the assistance of Mrs. Paul Sanders received the members and their guests.

The meeting was called to order by the President, Mrs. Chas. Maddox. It was decided that half an hour before each regular meeting, namely the second Thursday of each month at 1:30 P. M., a round table discussion be held on the subject "International Relations." Mrs. James Pomeroy, chairman will be in charge of this discussion. At this time when the world seems to be in a state of chaos, the Department of International Relations is of vital importance and should function to its fullest extent.

A report was given by Mrs. David Kreuger on the receipts netted on tag day.

After the business meeting Mrs. Walker gave a most interesting talk on "Mexican Craft" and displayed a very fine collection of vases, wood carvings, beautiful hand woven hangings, all of which were very colorful and decorative. Preceding tea all the guests were invited to go thru the home and see many more beautiful pieces with which Mrs. Walker has so artistically furnished her home.

Tea and cakes were served later by the hostesses. The guests were: Mrs. S. J. Gottschalk, Third Dist., Chairman, Mrs. George Sayers, Miss Clara Myrick, Mrs. Frank Waaton and Miss Gehrkins.

Handy Small Table Made of Camp Stool

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

HAVE you ever wished for a small, low table that would appear from nowhere and disappear again when you were through with it? Have you ever thought it would be nice if Father's ottoman could be folded up and put out of the way when not in use? Or perhaps you have unpacked a suit case in a guest room and wished for something other than the bed; a chair or the floor to put it on during the process?

A camp stool plus a tray to fit the top makes a very satisfactory small table to place beside a game table or to set up for your books or mending basket by your favorite chair. But be sure to dress it up so that it will look its best either when in use or when folded up and placed in some out of the way corner. A remnant of material and some upholstery braid will do the trick. Stain and wax are suggested for the base as paint might be marred in folding the stool.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Mrs. Spears has prepared for our readers a booklet containing 32 useful and practical suggestions for beautifying the home; with step-by-step directions clearly illustrated. To get one of these useful booklets, just send name and address, with 10 cents in coin to Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

Eire Plans Center of Learning To Restore Early Irish Culture

EARLY COLLEGES. Map shows the location of the first colleges in Ireland. Armagh, in the northern section, saw the first institution established in about 450 A. D. Additional schools then sprang up in Louth and Kildare. A new center of learning aiming to restore the culture of these earlier universities is planned for Dublin.

Modern Educational Institution Will Be Established At Dublin.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

Eamon de Valera, prime minister of the Republic of Eire, plans to visit a number of American universities while in this country. These visits are in line with his recently announced project to restore Ireland as a center of learning through the establishment at Dublin of an institute of higher studies.

Dublin has long been the resort of scholars. The library of Trinity college has more than 2,000 manuscripts of rare value, in addition to 250,000 volumes, including many books printed in the Fifteenth century. There are over 150,000 volumes in the National library in addition to manuscripts; collections are also found in St. Patrick's library, the Royal Irish academy, and in the many monasteries.

The new plan for an institution of higher studies is reminiscent of a period more than a thousand years ago when Ireland was an internationally recognized center of learning.

First College at Armagh.

A college was established at Armagh about 450 A. D., with others at Kildare, Louth and Noendrum. Education received great impetus early in the Sixth century with the founding of the monastery at Clonard where as many as 3,000 students are said to have been in attendance at one time. With the founding of other monastic schools in the "Annals of The Four Masters." With the aid of three other scholars, it was recorded by Michael O'Clery, a Franciscan from Louvain who, between 1632 and 1636, traveled throughout the country visiting abbeys and friaries in search of the ancient vellum books and age-yellowed manuscripts. These manuscripts, he reported, would fill more than 12,000 large printed pages.

The manuscripts for the most part contain history and legend, often hopelessly confused. The original stories had been preserved unwritten for many centuries by the bards, an important Irish institution. The greatest of the bards were trained from nine to twelve years, learning the 250 national romances and the 100 secondary legends, in addition to other poems. They record the gradual development of racial and tribal history, with often an admixture of Celtic mythology.

Even the early laws of the land were not written. Thus, when St. Patrick would revise the ancient law of the kingdom, a solemn assembly of three bishops, three jurists and three poets was called. The task of the poets was to write the code in verse to facilitate memorizing. The laws were proclaimed at the national assemblies.

Macedonians Have History Of Conquest

Hitler's Statement Regarding Poland Referred to Ancient Persecutions.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

What did Herr Hitler mean by his cryptic statement, in a letter to Premier Daladier of France, that "The Macedonian conditions on our eastern frontiers must be removed?"

Three possible interpretations, political, historic and Biblical, suggest themselves.

In The Acts, 16, of the Bible, is the story of the vision which "appeared to Paul in the night . . . saying, Come over into Macedonia and help us." Translated to mean a plea for help, this "Macedonian cry" has echoed frequently in the pages of history covering turbulent events that have taken place there.

Across Invasion Path.

Lying across the early East-West path of conquest, the Macedonian region of the Balkan peninsula in southeast Europe has seen from ancient times successive waves of domination, with attendant pillage, massacres and persecutions.

With the invasion of the Turks in the Fourteenth century, Macedonia, along with other Balkan areas, became part of the Turkish empire. As a vassal people the Macedonians knew social and economic oppression, with racial and religious persecutions that long filled news accounts from that part of the world. This period of Turkish overlordship was ended by the Balkan wars of 1912-13.

Even more complex is the modern Macedonian background with reference to its bloody political disputes between conflicting races and nationalities who live within its limits. The polyglot peoples who inhabit the indefinite Macedonian region, which cuts across three national borders from Salonika on the south roughly northwest toward the Albania frontier, comprise Greeks, Bulgars, Serbians, Albanians, Turks, Wallachians and Jews.

Household News By Eleanor Howe

Coffee and waffles are star performers for Sunday breakfast. See Recipe Below.

At the Sound of the Breakfast Bell

Five mornings a week there's a last-minute scramble to get to school on time, and a mad dash to beat the boss to the office—and too frequently the all-important business of eating breakfast is neglected. Maybe the breakfast menu needs revising, or needs a "beauty treatment" to increase its appetite appeal.

If all homemakers would join forces to raise the standard of American breakfasts, it would be a long step in the direction of happiness and well being for the family. Breakfast needn't be elaborate to be good, but it should consist of foods well chosen and well prepared to tempt the appetites of members of the family who aren't ordinarily interested in this first meal of the day.

Serving something new, occasionally, is a more effective means of getting the laggards out of bed than the loudest alarm clock!

Blueberry Muffins. (Makes 10-12 muffins)

1/4 cup butter
1/4 cup sugar
1 egg
2 1/2 cups flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 cup milk
1 cup blueberries (well drained)

Cream the butter and add sugar gradually. Add the egg, well beaten, and mix. Sift all dry ingredients, reserving 1/4 cup flour to be mixed with the blueberries. Add milk, mixed with vanilla extract, and dry ingredients alternately. Add the floured blueberries. Bake in greased muffin tins in a moderate oven (375 degrees) approximately 20 minutes.

Bacon With Apple Rings.

7 slices bacon
1 egg (slightly beaten with 1 tablespoon cold water)
White corn meal
3 apples (peeled and cut in 1/2-inch round slices)
1 teaspoon powdered sugar
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
Juice of 1 lemon

Melt sufficient bacon fat to cover the bottom of a skillet. Cut bacon strips in halves, dip in beaten egg; then dip in corn meal. Sauté gently in the bacon fat until each strip is a golden brown. Place apple slices in a mixture of the lemon juice, sugar, and cinnamon for a few minutes. Drain the apple slices, without drying, and sauté in the remaining fat. Place bacon strips in the center of a warmed platter and arrange around it the browned apple rings.

Hominy Grits With Baked Eggs. (Serves 4-6)

3 cups freshly cooked grits
5 to 6 eggs
Salt, pepper and paprika
1/2 cup cheese (grated)

Fill a shallow baking pan with the cooked grits. With a spoon make hollows or wells in the grits. Drop a fresh egg into each hollow. Sprinkle with salt, pepper, paprika and grated cheese. Bake in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees) for 20 to 25 minutes.

French Toast With Pineapple and Bacon. (Serves 4)

8 slices bacon
2 eggs (slightly beaten)
1/2 cup milk
1/4 teaspoon salt
4 slices bread
4 slices pineapple (canned)

Pan fry bacon until nicely browned and crisp; drain and keep hot. Combine slightly beaten eggs, milk, and salt, and mix well. Dip bread in egg mixture and sauté in the hot bacon fat until golden brown. Then sauté the pineapple slices.

Place one pineapple slice on each piece of toast and top with two slices of bacon. Garnish with parsley, and serve very hot.

Waffles.

2 cups pastry flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 eggs
1 cup milk
1/2 cup butter (melted)
Sliced bacon

Mix and sift all dry ingredients. Beat egg yolks thoroughly and add milk. Then pour this milk mixture into the dry ingredients and blend lightly. Add melted butter and fold in the well beaten egg whites. Cut bacon into 1-inch pieces; place 1 piece on each waffle iron section and then pour waffle batter on hot waffle iron.

Buckwheat Cakes.

1 yeast cake
1 cup lukewarm water
3 tablespoons dark molasses
1 tablespoon salt
1 1/2 cups flour
1 1/2 cups buckwheat flour
1 cup lukewarm water (approximately)
1 teaspoon soda dissolved in 1/4 cup water

Soak yeast cake in 1 cup of lukewarm water. Add molasses, salt, and flour, and enough additional lukewarm water to make a batter a little thicker than that used for ordinary griddle cakes. Put batter in a covered bean jar, and let stand over night. In the morning add soda dissolved in water. Bake on a hot greased griddle.

Birmingham Eggs.

Slice bread 1 inch thick, trim off crusts and cut a 1 1/2-inch hole in the center. Place in heavy frying pan containing generous amount of butter. Break an egg in the center of each slice. Fry bread slices until golden brown, then turn and brown other side. Salt and pepper.

Quick Butterscotch Rolls.

2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup shortening
3/4 cup milk
Melted butter
1 cup light brown sugar
1/4 cup butter
1/2 cup pecan nut meats

Sift flour, baking powder and salt. Cut in shortening and add milk. Roll out and brush with melted butter. Sprinkle with 1/4 cup brown sugar. Roll firmly like a jelly roll. Cream together the remaining 3/4 cup of sugar and 1/4 cup butter. Spread this mixture, together with the pecan nutmeats, over bottom of baking pan. Slice biscuit roll in 1/2-inch slices and place cut side up in the butter-sugar-nut mixture. Bake 20 minutes in moderate oven (350 degrees) and turn out of pan at once. Serve upside down.

Important Fashions In Simple Patterns

THE smock-frock is really a fashion, not just a comfortable maternity dress. It's smart and young and practical. No. 1833 is a version of it that may be worn for afternoon, because the pleats, in both the smock top and the adjustable slip skirt, give it a touch of dressiness. Make it of flat crepe, thin wool or georgette.

Good for a Whole Wardrobe. Unusually useful is the pretty frock for little girls (1836) because it can be made in two ways—with round collar and frills, or with the plain square neckline. Therefore you can thriftily make a whole wardrobe for your own small daughter, by using this simple pattern again and again. School cottons, like gingham or linen, as well as challis and jersey, are smart fabrics for it.

The Patterns.

No. 1833 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 5 1/2 yards of 39-inch material with short sleeves; 5 3/4 yards with long sleeves; 1 1/4 yards for the top of the slip; 3/4 yard for contrasting revers, cuffs, collar.

No. 1836 is designed for sizes 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 years. Size 3 requires 1 1/4 yards of 35-inch material; 1/2 yard for contrasting collar; 2 yards of pleating or frills.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1324, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

Why Let Yourself Get Constipated?

Why endure those dull headachy days due to constipation, plus the inevitable trips to the medicine chest, if you can avoid both by getting at the cause of the trouble?

If your constipation, like that of millions, is due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, the "better way" is to eat Kellogg's All-Bran. This crunchy toasted breakfast cereal is the ounce of prevention that's worth a pound of emergency relief. It helps you not only to get regular but to keep regular, day after day and month after month, by the pleasantest means you ever knew.

Eat Kellogg's All-Bran every day, drink plenty of water, and see if you don't forget all about constipation. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

Ever One's Best

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells. Get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a good general system tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life. WELL WORTH TRYING!
